ENDNOTES

1 Jehovah is the anglicized form of the Hebrew name Yahweh, traditionally translated "Lord." Compare the similar situation with Jesus, the anglicized form of Hebrew Yeshua.

[2](4:2, 3) First class condition, using ei with the indicative. It may be paraphrased, "If, and I grant it, You are the Son of God" or "Since You are the Son of God."

3 A "dispensation" is an administration or stewardship. It describes the methods God uses in dealing with the human race at any particular time in history. The word does not mean a time period per se, but rather the divine program during any age. A similar use is seen when we speak of the Reagan administration, indicating the policies President Reagan followed during his years in office.

4 Albert Barnes, Notes on the New Testament, Matthew and Mark, p. 47.

5 The critical text (labeled "NU" in NKJV footnotes) omits without a cause, which would rule out even righteous indignation.

6 The critical (NU) text reads Gentiles for tax collectors.

7 The majority text (based on the majority of manuscripts) reads friends for brethren.

8 Some scholars teach that the doxology is adapted from 1 Chronicles 29:11 for liturgical purposes. This is merely a guess. The traditional Protestant (KJV) form of the prayer is completely defensible.

[9](7:13, 14) Both the critical and majority texts have an exclamatory reading here: "How narrow is the gate and difficult is the way which leads to life, and there are few who find it!" When the oldest manuscripts (usually NU) and the vast bulk of manuscripts (M) agree against the traditional text (TR) they are almost certainly correct. In such cases the KJ tradition has weak textual support.

45 I. Velikovsky, Earth in Upheaval, p. 136.

48 The NU text adds "nor the Son."

50 The Greek singular pronoun su is spelled out for emphasis. The second you is humin (plural) and the third renders the ending on the verb opsesthe.

52 If all the quoted parts are put together, it reads "This is Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews." Another possibility is that each evangelist is complete but quotes different languages, which could have varied.

53 In Greek the definite predicate nouns which precede the verb usually lack the article (part of "Colwell's Rule").

[54](27:65, 66) Merrill F. Unger, Unger's Bible Handbook, p. 491.

55 "Rejoice" was the standard Greek greeting; here on Resurrection Morning the literal translation of the NKJV seems most appropriate.

ENDNOTES

[1](1:2, 3) The critical (NU) text reads "Isaiah the prophet," but the first quote is from Malachi; the traditional reading, "the Prophets," supported by a majority of the mss., is more accurate.

6 Both NU (oldest) and M (majority) of mss. add "and Your sisters." This is no doubt the correct reading.

16 Three times (vv. 44, 46 and 48) our Lord quotes Isaiah 66:24 to warn of the dangers of hell. This emphatic parallelism of form (found in TR and majority text) is softened, we believe, by the critical (NU) text, which omits the text twice.

17 NU text omits this clause.

18 NU omits 'Tor those who trust in riches," but this is the main emphasis of the passage.

[21] (13:29) The subject here in Greek is merely the ending of the verb "is" (estin), which in context could be "He" (Christ) or "it" (summer — the events predicted). The resultant meanings are similar.

[23](14:63, 64) Joseph of Arimathea and Nicodemus are believed to have been absent from this illegal meeting.

24 The critical (NU) text omits this quotation in Mark.

25 The majority of mss. add "Him," personalizing the leaders' (probably false) promise.

26 In modern Greek this word "Preparation" means "Friday."

2 The same word (anōthen) occurs in John 3:7: "You must be born again" (or "from above").

[3](1:16, 17) G. Coleman Luck, Luke, p. 17.

4 The Greek word is a passive participle, showing she received the favor. The Latin gratia plena ("full of grace") has been misused to teach that Mary is a source of grace. This points up the importance of precisely accurate translation.

[8](2:13, 14) The critical (NU) text reads "to men of good will," which seems to contradict the Bible doctrine of man's depravity. Evangelicals who accept the critical reading generally paraphrase. The KJ tradition is probably best.

9 The NU reading "His father and mother" does not deny the Virgin Birth, but is less clear. Compare also v. 43 in the traditional and majority texts vs. the NU text.

10 The NU text omits "in spirit."

12 John Charles Ryle, Expository Thoughts on the Gospels, St. Luke, 1:121.

13 The NU text reads "the Pharisees and their scribes," meaning those scribes who held the Pharisaic position.

14 Many scholars, however, believe the "plain" (KJ) was a flat place on the mountain side and the differences are merely from condensation, choice of emphasis by Matthew and Luke, and editorial arrangement (inspired by God).

15 The majority of mss. omit "all," suggesting that only some would praise compromisers.

16 F. B. Meyer, The Heavenlies, p. 26.

17 The critical reading ("well- built") followed in most modern Bibles, misses the point. It is not how but on whom (Christ) one builds one's life!

37 Luke gives a shorter version of the "Disciple's Prayer," which perhaps suggests it is not to be recited word-for-word. The omissions in the critical (NU) text (see NKJV footnotes) are generally considered interpolations from Matthew by the editors of that text.

63 This is the only place in the English Bible (KJ tradition) where this beloved name occurs. Even though there are thousands of congregations named "Calvary Church," most modern Bibles have scrapped this traditional rendering.

66 Stewart, Life and Teaching, p. 168.
67 The traditional and majority text reading, "Lord, remember me," is much more impressive than the critical (NU) text "Jesus, remember me." The title of respect "Lord" (can also mean "Sir") shows deeper faith than the use of a (then common) personal name.
68 Erdman, Luke, pp. 217, 218.
69 The NU text reads, " 'What kind of conversation is this that you have with one another?' And they stood still, looking sad."
[70](24:52, 53) The critical (NU) text omits "praising and" as well as the final "Amen"

ENDNOTES

1 The critical text (NU in NKJV margin) reads only begotten God. The traditional only begotten Son is found in most manuscripts and also in 3:16.

2 J. Cynddylan Jones, Studies in the Gospel According to St., p. 103.

3 James S. Stewart, The Life and Teaching of Jesus Christ, pp. 66, 67.

4 Only John reports the "double amen" (NKJV, most assuredly). The other Gospels, apparently condensing our Lord's expression, read "amen" (NKJV, assuredly).

5 George Williams, The Student's Commentary on the Holy Scriptures, p. 194.

6 Jones, Studies, p. 148.

7 The little Greek connective de can mean and, now, but, etc. Modern English Bibles tend to delete these frequently. This is one of the few places where the KJV did so, and the NKJV followed suit.

8 Another valid interpretation that fits the context of contrasting spiritual and physical birth is that the water refers to physical birth and the Spirit refers to the Holy Spirit. The rabbis used "water" for the male seed, and water could also refer to the sack of watery liquid which breaks when a baby is born.

9 F. W. Boreham, further documentation unavailable.

[10](4:41, 42) The critical text (NU) omits the Christ.

11 In Greek there are separate forms for addressing one person (cf. Old English thou, thee) and more than one (cf. ye, you). The plural is used here.

12 The critical text reads Bethzatha, but archaeology has confirmed the traditional name used in the majority of manuscripts and the KJV tradition.

13 James Gifford Bellett, The Evangelists, p. 50.

14 J. Sidlow Baxter, Explore the Book, V:309.

15 There are other verses which teach that a believer will one day stand before the Judgment Seat of Christ (Rom. 14:10; 2 Cor. 5:10). However, the question of his sins will not be brought up at that time for punishment. That question was settled at Calvary. At the Judgment Seat of Christ, the believer's life and service will be reviewed, and he will either receive rewards or suffer loss. It will not be then a question of his soul's salvation, but of his life's fruitfulness.

16 If this were the only verse in the Bible on the subject of resurrection, one would think that all the dead will be raised at the same time. However, we know from other portions of Scripture, particularly Revelation 20, that a period of at least one thousand years elapses between the two resurrections. The First Resurrection is the resurrection of those who have been saved through faith in Christ. The Second Resurrection includes all who have died as unbelievers.

17 The Greek verb form for search is ambiguous. It may be imperative ("Search," KJV) or indicative ("you search," NKJV). The context favors the NKJV translation.

18 Guy King, To My Son, p. 104.

19 W. H. Griffith Thomas, The Apostle John: His Life and Writings, pp. 173, 74.

20 Frederick Brotherton Meyer, Tried By Fire, p. 152.

21 The manna was a small, round, white food which God miraculously provided for Israel in the wilderness. They had to gather the manna from the ground each morning of the first six days of every week.

22 NU text reads "true food . . . true drink," but the meaning is virtually the same (reality).

23 A synagogue is a local Jewish religious meeting place, but is not the same as the temple in Jerusalem where alone animal sacrifices could be made.

24 The critical text (NU) reads "You are the Holy One of God."

25 It is helpful to know that the Greek word for "Jew" (Ioudaios) can mean (1) a Judean (as opposed to a Galilean); (2) a Jewish person of any sort (including one who accepts Christ); (3) or an opponent of Christianity, especially a religious leader. John uses it mostly in the last sense, though he himself was a Jew in the second sense.

26 Meyer, Tried, p. 129.

27 The critical (NU) text's omission of "yet" is unfortunate. It seems to imply deception on our Lord's part.

28 J. N. Darby, further documentation unavailable.

29 7:53 through 8:11 does not appear in the most ancient mss. of John, but is found in over 900 Greek mss. (the vast majority). There is some question as to whether these verses form a part of the original text. We believe that it is proper to accept them as part of the inspired text. All that they teach is in perfect agreement with the rest of the Bible. Augustine writes that some excluded this passage for fear it would promote loose views on morality.

30 R. C. H. Lenski, The Interpretation of Colossians, Thessalonians, Timothy, Titus, Philemon, pp. 701, 02.

31 The NU text reads "Son of Man" here, which does not fit the context of worship nearly as well as the majority reading.

32 The Greek has a double negative for emphasis (not permitted in standard English).

35 Burkitt, further documentation unavailable.

36 The shortest verse in the Greek NT is on the opposite side of the emotional spectrum, "Rejoice always" (Pantote chairete, 1 Thess. 5:16).

37 J. C. Ryle, Expository Thoughts on the Gospels, St. John, II:295.

38 Meyer, Tried, p. 112.

39 Ryle, John, 11:309, 10.

40 The critical text's reading "that she may keep" instead of "she has kept" seems to contradict both this context and Mary's absence at the tomb on Easter morning. NIV solves the problem by paraphrasing.

[41] (12:24) T. G. Ragland, further documentation unavailable.

[42](13:13, 14) Of course, there are times, especially in Eastern lands, when one would literally wash someone else's feet, but this is only one example of humble service.

43 The Greek grammar (first class condition plus ei with the indicative) assumes it to be true.

44 Other popular illustrations include the bird in the air with the air in the bird, and the fish in water with the water in the fish.

ENDNOTES

1 J. B. Phillips, The Young Church in Action, p. vii.

2 Between Christ's resurrection and ascension were forty days. Ten additional days elapsed before Pentecost. But the Lord did not say exactly how many days, perhaps to keep the disciples in a state of expectation.

3 This is not an exact quotation from the Psalm as we have it in our Bible. There are two possible reasons for this. (1) The writers of the NT often quoted OT Scriptures from the Septuagint Version (LXX) while our translations were made from the original Hebrew text; this would make for some variation in the words. (2) As is often the case, the Holy Spirit, who inspired the OT, exercises the liberty of adapting it somewhat when quoting it in a NT context.

4 The same words are used for "dwell together" in the Greek Version of Psalm 133:1 (132:1 in the LXX) as are used here in Acts for "in one place" (to auto).

5 Other ministries of the Holy Spirit which become ours at conversion are: the anointing (1 John 2:27), the sealing (Eph. 1:13), and the guarantee (Eph. 1:14). Other ministries of the Spirit which are conditional upon our obedience and surrender are: guidance (Acts 8:29), joy (1 Thess. 1:6), and power (Rom. 15:13).

6 The word translated usually refers to labor pangs. The resurrection of Christ is likened to a birth from death to life. The sufferings connected with the entire process were intense but temporary. In Psalm 18:5 the same expression is rendered "the sorrows of Sheol."

7 Paradise is the same as the third heaven (2 Cor. 12:2, 4).

8 Charles C. Ryrie, The Acts of the Apostles, p. 24.

9 Charles H. Spurgeon, The Treasury of the New Testament, 1:530.

10 The critical (NU) text omits "gladly."

[11](2:44, 45) F. W. Grant, "Acts," The Numerical Bible: Acts to 2 VI:25, 26.

12 Whenever we read of Paul and others going into the temple, it means into the temple courts, not into the sanctuary. Only the priests could enter there. Gentiles were permitted to go only into the outer court; to venture further was punishable by death.

13 In the critical text "church" doesn't occur till 5:11.

[20](4:27, 28) Here "Servant" is the preferred translation of pais, rather than "child," as in 3:13, 26; 4:30.

25 Ryrie suggests that the beating might have been for their disobedience to the previous command of the Sanhedrin (cf. Deut. 25:2,3).

26 There are three intriguing variations in the ms. traditions here: TR: "His name"; NU: "the name"; M: "the name of Jesus".

27 Stephen (Gk., Stephanos) means "garland" or "victory wreath."

28 The word order may indicate that they were more jealous of Moses' honor than of God's!

29 "The original and the Greek version might both be true; the latter reckoning in five sons of Manasseh and Ephraim born in Egypt (1 Chron. vii. 14-27), according to a latitude of various forms, by no means uncommon in such lists." Kelly, Acts, p. 84.

33 Homer L. Payne, "What Is A Missionary Church?" The Sunday School Times, February 22, 1964, p. 129.

[34](8:12, 13) Since the text says Simon "believed" and he asks Peter to pray for him (v. 24), an argument has been made that he was saved but very carnal.

35 An ancient Philistine city on the Mediterranean coast southwest of Jerusalem, en route from Palestine to Egypt.

36 Candace (or Kandake) is probably a title, like Pharaoh, rather than a personal name.

37 Male servants of female dignitaries were sometimes castrated. Eunuchs were barred from first class citizenship in Judaism (Deut. 23:1). They were limited to the status of "proselytes of the gate." But here a eunuch becomes a full-fledged member of the Christian church.

38 Both the oldest (NU) and the majority (M) of manuscripts lack this verse. It is thought to be a baptismal formula used in Rome in the early second century, being found in Western mss., including the Latin translation. Those who teach baptismal regeneration obviously do not want to lose this verse.

39 That the ancient mode of baptism was immersion is admitted by most Roman Catholic scholars, Calvin, and many who practice pouring or sprinkling. In all fairness, however, it should be mentioned that "into" and "out of" can also be translated "to" and "from," though the NKJV is quite literal and accurate.

40 Ethiopia is the only country in Africa with a continuous Christian tradition from earliest times to today. Philip's faithfulness was perhaps the key that unlocked the door for the church there.

49 It was expedient for a tanner to operate outside the city limits. To be close to the sea was ideal for sanitary disposal of animal carcasses.

[50](11:20, 21) In the NT, "Hellenists" usually means Grecian Jews, but here it can only mean Greeks, i.e., Gentiles. Note the context: Verse 19, "preaching the word to no one but the Jews only." Verse 20, "to Greeks also" (in contrast to Jews).

[51](11:25, 26) James A. Stewart, Evangelism, pp. 100, 101.

52 Both Alexandrian (NU) and Majority (M) texts read "to Jerusalem." Since Barnabas and Saul are again at Antioch in 13:1, it is possible that copyists "corrected" the reading to "from."

53 Donald Grey Barnhouse, The Measure of Your Faith, Book 69, p. 21.

[54](13:7, 8) In the KJV of verse 7, Sergius Paulus is called a "deputy," but more accurately his title was "proconsul" (NKJV). Luke showed exact knowledge of the names of offices which were then common in the Roman Empire. Thus, in Greek he called the magistrates at Philippi stratēgoi, Latin, practors (16:20), and identified the officers as rhabdouchoi, Latin, lictors (16:35). He correctly named the rulers of Thessalonica as politarchs (17:6), whereas in Ephesus he correctly distinguished them as asiarchs (19:31).

"All these were the local authorities in the different cities, the Roman governor, or proconsul, being over them as ruling in each province. Luke then, by giving each his correct title in these different cities, shows that he knew well what he was about and this mark of accuracy should increase confidence in him as a faithful historian" – C. E. Stuart, Tracings from the Acts of the Apostles, p. 272.

57 Here the word practically equals "missionaries."

58 These Greek names are used in the original text. The 1611 text uses Jupiter and Mercury, the more common Latin names of these gods.

62 Some think that the four forbidden practices refer back to Leviticus and 18, as follows: things polluted by idols (17:8, 9); sexual immorality – not only adultery and polygamy (18:20), homosexuality (18:22), and bestiality (18:23), but also marrying blood relatives (18:6-14) and even relatives by marriage, that is, in-law relatives (18:15, 16); eating things strangled or improperly butchered (17:15); eating blood (Lev. 17:10-12). Jewish believers would be offended if they saw Gentile believers violating these codes (Acts 15:21).

77 The supplied "by" is commonly understood in such a construction (participle of means). Paraphrased: "Get up (anastas) and get baptized (baptisai); get your sins washed away (apolousai) by means of calling on (epikalesamenos) the name of the Lord."

78 The Greek tense here is no doubt a conative imperfect: "I tried to compel them ..."
