ENDNOTES

1 See Ephesians 1 and Romans 9 for fuller treatment of election.

2 Many believe that while divorce is sometimes valid, a church officer should not be a divorced person.

3 As so often (see NKJV footnotes), omissions are favored by the critical text, which is based largely on the oldest extant manuscripts, coming chiefly from Egypt. The KJV and NKJV favor the traditional text, (TR), which is usually, but by no means always, supported by the majority of manuscripts as well (majority text).

4 It sounds quaint today because the meaning of "peculiar" has changed. The KJV is a very accurate translation; most so-called "errors" are (as here) due to nearly four centuries of changes in English.

5 The word heretic (KJV) is from a Greek word meaning factious or divisive (NKJV). A person who splits churches usually teaches false or "heretical" doctrine, but this is a later development of the word hairetikos itself.

[2](V. 2) If one compares the status of Christian women with pagan and Muslim women, she (or he) will have to agree that the true "Liberator of women" is the Lord Jesus Christ.

[3](V. 7) The majority of mss. read thanksgiving (charin) for (charan).

[4](V. 9) The Greek words for "aged" (presbutēs) and ambassador (presbeutēs) are so similar that Bentley conjectured that Paul wrote "ambassador." The traditional mss. are totally against this conjecture, however nicely it may fit the context.

ENDNOTES

1 The NU text omits "firm to the end."

2 Arthur T. Pierson, further documentation unavailable.

3 Theologians summarize the doctrine as to whether or not Christ could sin in two Latin phrases: "non posse peccare" — not possible to sin and "posse non peccare" — possible not to sin. The true teaching is non posse peccare: He could not sin.

4 G. Campbell Morgan, "Choice Gleanings Calendar."

5 The words are not the same in the original: The usual word for "baptism" is baptisma; here the word is baptismoi, "ritual washings."

6 The majority text reads, "And let us do this. ..."

7 The NKJV margin is a better translation (since the form and context are the same as the previous clauses): "and have fallen away."

8 The majority of mss. read "we have strong consolation" (indicative), rather than "might have strong consolation" (subjunctive). The former is even more certain.

ENDNOTES

1 The Greek word epithumia is just a strengthened form of "desire." The English word lust (cf. 1611 KJV) originally meant simply "strong desire" too, but has taken on definite sexual connotations.

2 The words "So then" (Gk. hoste) are replaced by "Know" (iste) in some mss., and most modern versions that prefer the Alexandrian (NU) readings. However, the traditional reading best fits the context — a major break summing up what we should do in light of vv. 1-18.

3 The same Greek word (psuche) means both "life" and "soul" and it is not always certain which rendering is better. Also "save" (in Greek and English) does not necessarily refer to eternal salvation. It can refer to healing, deliverance, rescue, and other things. Thus, the expression "save your soul" could mean in some contexts "make a success of your life" (for Christ).

4 The Greek word here is sunagoge (congregation). Since this word later came to be used only for Jewish congregations ("synagogues"), this is an indication of the very early date of James. "Congregation" (Tyndale), "church" (KJV), and "assembly" (JND), are usually translations of the word ekklesia, a (called-out) assembly. This was originally a political term (cf. General Assembly of the United Nations).

5 However, in all fairness, it should be pointed out that the Greek does not have the word for "that" here, but simply the definite article ("the"). While the article may sometimes have a demonstrative force, it could just be the ordinary article used with an abstract noun. Since this is admittedly interpretive, the NKJV, which had "that faith" in its 1st edition, reverted to the KJV reading in later editions.

6 The NU text reads "useless" for "dead."

[7](3:5, 6) Clovis G. Chappel, Sermons from the Psalms, p.132.

8 Robert G. Lee, Lord I Believe, pp. 166-168.

9 Most mss. read "Adulterers and adulteresses," perhaps suggesting literal immorality in the congregations addressed. The Alexandrian mss. (NU) have only the feminine form "adulteresses," which would almost demand a non-literal meaning. The KJV and NKJV allow either meaning, physical and/or spiritual adultery.

10 The most ancient mss. had not yet developed separate forms for capital and small letters. Ideally, there would be an "S" that was somewhere between upper case and lower case for the many places in the NT where a passage is not clearly Spirit or spirit. Since there is no such form, translators and editors must decide according to context. Here and elsewhere good Bible scholars are divided.

[11](4: 11, 12) NU text reads a neighbor

12 Both NU and M texts read "judged," but the context does suggest a negative verdict, so "condemned" is still valid.

13 The majority text has a most interesting variant reading here. The KJV (and NU) reading "into (lit. "under") judgment" is krisin. The majority of mss., however, read eis ("into") hupokrisin ("hypocrisy"). If the little preposition "eis" were to drop out by mistake in copying, it would be natural to take the prefix on hupokrisin as a separate preposition and come up with "under judgment." While both expressions fit the immediate context, the whole Epistle of James, coming to a close here, could be said to be a warning against falling into religious hypocrisy.

14 The NU text reads "Therefore confess your sins."

ENDNOTES

1 There are other forms of sanctification which take place later. When a person is born again, he becomes positionally sanctified because he is "in Christ" (Heb. 10:10, 14). Throughout his Christian life he should experience practical sanctification, that is, the process of becoming more like Christ (1 Pet. 1:15). In heaven he will achieve perfect sanctification, for he will never again sin (Col. 1:22). See Excursus on Sanctification after Hebrews 2:11.

2 The majority of Greek mss. read "known" (eidotes) rather than "seen" (idontes). The resultant meaning is about the same; i.e., they had not been personally acquainted with Jesus on earth.

9 The critical (NU) text omits "through the Spirit."

10 Footnote in F. W. Grant, "1 Peter," The Numerical Bible, Hebrews to Revelation, p. 149.

[11] (1:23) The NU text omits "forever."

12 The Alexandrian Text (NU in NKJV footnotes) reads "grow up to salvation." However, this reading could cast doubt on assurance of salvation.

13 Biblical Greek lithon (stone) akro- (top or tip) go (of corner), hence cornerstone or capstone.

14 The NU text reads "disbelieve" for "are disobedient," but since believing the gospel is also called obeying the Gospel, the meaning is about the same.

15 A literal rendering is noble or lovely (Gk. halos, cf. English calligraphy, beautiful writing).

24 Instead of "courteous" (philophrones), the NU text reads "humble" (tapeinophrones). Both are fine virtues that fit the context; which is chosen as original depends on one's view of NT textual criticism. We follow the KJ tradition here.

25 The NU text reads "Christ as Lord" for "the Lord God." This would suggest that the Christ of the NT is the Jehovah Sabaoth of the OT.

26 Albert Barnes, Notes on the New Testament: James, Peter, John and Jude, p. 191.

27 The NU text lacks the last sentence of verse 14. Since "rests upon you" and "glorified" both end with the same letters in Greek (-etai) it would be easy to omit it by accident. This is technically called omission by "homoeoteleuton" (similar ending).

28F. B. Meyer, Tried by Fire, p. 27.

29 G. Campbell Morgan, Searchlights from the Word, p. 366.

30 Meyer, Tried, pp. 180-181.

[31] (5:2) The NU text reads "according to God" for "willingly." The traditional reading of KJ and NKJV (found in TR and majority text) fits the context much better as a contrast to compulsion.

32 J. Sidlow Baxter, Awake, My Heart, p. 294. The beautiful play on words of the KJ tradition is not in the original Greek, where the two "cares" are unrelated words. It comes from the first printed English NT (1526), the work of the outstanding translator and martyr of the Inquisition, William Tyndale (1484-1536). His text reads "cast all youre care to hym: for he careth for you."

34 Harry Lacey, God and the Nations, p. 92.

35 The ordinary Greek word huios; Paul uses teknon, literally "born one" (Scots bairn) or child.

6 When we use two words to give one meaning, such as "good and mad" to mean very mad, it is called a hendiadys (from the Greek for "one through two"). The Bible uses this figure of speech frequently, as here, so it is good to be able to recognize it.

8 Roman Catholic tradition makes Mt. Tabor the site of the Transfiguration, and it does indeed have shrines on it. Historically this tradition is impossible, as Tabor is not a high mountain and the Gospels say it was "exceedingly high." Also, there was probably a Roman garrison on Tabor in the time of our Lord, a poor backdrop for a private revelation! Mt. Hermon, a high snowcapped range north of Galilee is a very likely site.

9 The Greek word epilusis can be translated "origin" (NKJV margin) as well as "interpretation."

ENDNOTES

1 The critical (NU) text omits the second "from the beginning."

2 The word teknia is from a word meaning to bear (children). The diminutive makes it "little born-ones," an exact counterpart to the tender Scots word "bairnies."

3 The traditional (and majority) texts read "you know all things" (panta).

The critical (NU) reads "you all (pantes) know." It is easy to see why the difficult reading would be changed to the easy- to-understand "you all know."

4 The NU text adds "And we are."

[5] (4:3) The NU text omits the second "that" and "Christ has come in the flesh."

[6](4:7, 8) G. S. Barrett, The First Epistle General of St. John, pp. 170-173.

[7](4:9, 10) Propitiation means satisfaction made for sin through a sacrifice. In the original, the word is related to the Greek word for "mercy seat." Under Britain's C. H. Dodd, a successful crusade was mounted against the word (and doctrine) so that, following the lead of the liberal RSV, most modern Bibles have changed the word. Since it is a standard "sound word" for a theological truth, we should maintain it (as in KJV and NKJV).

[8](4:9, 10) James R. Denney, The Death of Christ, 2d. ed., p. 276. The first part of the quotation is apparently from an earlier edition.

9 W. E. Vine, The Epistles of John, p. 85.

10 NU text omits Him

[11](5:7, 8) Erasmus added these words to later editions of his Greek NT under pressure from the pope (they occur in the official Roman Catholic Latin Bible, the Vulgate). Only four very late Greek mss. have these words, so it is unsafe to use them. Those cultists who go door to door denying the Blessed Trinity are quick to point out these facts, so it is wise to be aware of the problem.

12 If the NU text "him" is read instead of "himself," then "He who has been born of God" will refer to Christ.

ENDNOTES

[1](V. 1) Less likely, the Greek word for elect (Eklektē, "Electa") could be taken as a proper name and the word "lady" as a title: "Lady Electa."

[2](V. 3) The critical (NU) and majority (M) texts read "us." The Greek words for you/we, for you/us, and your / our are only one letter different from each other, hence the copying problems in the mss. (See, e.g., V. 8, where the NU text reads you, not we.)

[3](V. 7) See Introduction to Colossians for a discussion of Gnosticism.

[4](V. 9) The NU text reads "goes ahead" or "progresses" (proagōn) instead of the "transgresses" (parabainōn) of the TR and majority text.

ENDNOTES

[1](V. 1) Instead of "sanctified" (hegiasmenois) the critical (NU) text reads "beloved"(ēgapēmenois). The strong con demnation of immorality in this letter is probably better introduced by its opposite, "sanctified."

[2](V. 4) The word "God" is omitted by the NU text. The two "Lords" are different words in the original. In "Lord Jesus" the usual word Kurios is used. In "Lord God" a synonym, Despotēs, occurs. (Our derivative "despot" is not a good translation due to its bad connotation in English.) Both words mean "Lord," "Master," or "Owner."

[3](V. 4) "Liberal" means free, but in religion it refers to those who deny major doctrines of the faith, such as inspiration, the virgin birth, the deity of Christ, and the blood atonement. So- called liberals are often open to any doctrine or religion – as long as it is not the orthodox biblical teaching.

[4](V. 4) The Neo- ("New") Orthodox are not really orthodox. They accept some of the teachings of the Bible, but use orthodox terminology to mask unbiblical unbelief. For example, the Bible "becomes" the word of God to the Neo-Orthodox if it "speaks to him." To the orthodox believer, the Bible is the word of God.

[5](V. 11) C. A. Coates, An Outline of Mark's Gospel and other Ministry, p. 125.

[6](V. 12) They called the feast an agape, literally "love."

[7](V. 12) The best reading is "carried away" or "along," as in the oldest (NU) and also the majority of mss. (majority text). The reading of the TR, KJV, and NKJV ("carried about") has weak support.

[8](V. 14) William Kelly, "Lectures on the Epistle of Jude," The Serious Christian, 1:123.

[9](V. 14) "Comes" translates the aorist (elthe). This may translate a Semitic prophetic perfect, a future event seen as so certain that it is expressed in the past.

[10](V. 22) The textual variants here are further complicated by the fact that the Greek verb diakrinomai can mean "doubting" or "making a distinction." See NKJV footnotes on vv. 22, 23.

[11](V. 23) J. B. Mayor, The Epistle of St. Jude and the Second Epistle of St. Peter, p. 51.

[12](V. 24) The majority text reads "them" for "you," meaning those sinning in the previous verses that spiritual Christians strive to save.

[13](V. 25) As a constant reading of the textual notes in the NKJV NT will show, the NU text (largely Alexandrian) is very prone to be shorter ("omit") than the traditional and majority texts. Hence, when it adds something it is especially interesting. In verse 25, three additions are made, so that it reads:

"To the only God our Savior,
Through Jesus Christ our Lord,
Be glory and majesty,
Dominion and power,
Before all time," etc.

It does omit the word "wise," however.

Perhaps Jude's perennially popular benediction was recited in this longer form in the Egyptian churches.

ENDNOTES

1 The verb used in the Gospel and Revelation is ekkentesam; in the Sep- tuagint of Zechariah the form is katorchēsanto.

2 In Hebrew and Greek the letters of the alphabet have numerical value. For example, aleph and alpha are 1, beth and beta are 2, etc. Hence every name can be added up. The Greek name for Jesus (Iesous), interestingly enough, adds up to 888. (Eight is the number of new beginning and resurrection.) It is believed that the letters of the Beast's name will actually equal 666. By slightly adjusting the spelling, "Nero Caesar" can be made to add up to 666, using this system. Other names also add up to 666, however, and one should avoid wild speculation.

3 The marginal reading here is the first of very many in the NKJV, of Revelation where both the oldest (NU) and majority (M) of readings agree against the reading of the TR, KJV, and NKJV. The reason for this is that Erasmus, who published the first Greek NT (1516), had only one copy of Revelation, and it was faulty. Hence, there are the many small variations in the footnotes or margin. Fortunately, the other books of the NT were represented by mss. that agreed largely with a yet-to-be discovered mass of mss. In this commentary, only crucial changes have been noted. The combination of NU and M will be the original reading, we believe. Where they differ from one another, the majority text is to be preferred.

4 The NU and M texts omit "the Beginning and the End."

5 "The Day of the Lord" is hē hēmera tou Kuriou in Greek; "the Lord's (lit. "lordly") Day" is "he Kuriakē hēmera" (whence "kirk, church").

6 James H. McConkey, The Book of Revelation: A Series of Outline Studies in the Apocalypse, p. 9.

7 John F. Walvoord, The Revelation of Jesus Christ, pp. 50-100.

[8](2:14, 15) Ella E. Pohle, Dr. C. I. Scofield's Question Box, p. 89.

9 The majority text reads, "your wife (or woman) Jezebel."

10 Daily Notes of the Scripture Union.

11 Richard Chevenix Trench, Commentary on the Epistles to the Seven Churches in Asia, p. 225.

12 Walvoord, Revelation, p. 104.

[13](5:9, 10) Both the NU and M texts have "them" and "they," which would mean that the elders are not singing about themselves, but about others. This might suggest that they are angelic beings.

[14](5:9, 10) NU text reads "kingdom."

[15](6:1, 2) The NU and M texts omit "and see."

16 The Greek word here is strong: Despotēs (but without the negative connotation of the English derivative).

17 Henry Barclay Swete, The Apocalypse of St. John, p. 109.

18 "Angel" and "eagle" look somewhat similar in Greek also (angelos and aetos), hence the copying error. "Eagle" is correct.

[19](9:16, 17) The majority of mss. read "one hundred million."

[20](9:18, 19) Hamilton Smith, The Revelation: An Expository Outline, p. 57.

[21](9:20, 21) The Greek word here is pharmakon, "medicine, potion, drug" (cf. English "pharmacy").

22 McConkey, The Book of Revelation, pp. 68, 69.

23 The NU and M texts read "kingdom . . . has become."

24 The Scofield Reference Bible, p. 1342.

[25](14:4, 5) J. D. Pentecost, Things to Come, p. 300.

[26](15:3, 4) "Saints" is a very weakly supported reading. Both the NU and M texts support "nations."

[27](15:3, 4) Arthur T. Pierson, Knowing the Scriptures, p. 248.

28 "Armageddon" comes from Hebrew "Har" (Mount) Megiddo. The majority text reads simply "Megiddo."

29 The 1611 text reads "righteousness," often interpreted by preachers as that righteousness of Christ which is imputed to the saints. While this is a sound doctrine, the Greek word dikaiōmata rules out that understanding. The word is plural (not the abstract singular which is dikaiōdsunē). Furthermore, it has a "passive" ending, here denoting something done (in this case, "righteous deeds"). Salvation is not in view in this passage.

30 Charles C. Ryrie, The Study Bible, New King James Version, p. 1953.

[31] (22:3-5) Pierson, The Ministry of Keswick, First Series, p. 144.

[32](22:18, 19) The reading "book of life" has no Gr'eek mss. support here! The last six verses were missing in Erasmus' Greek copy of Revelation so he translated these verses back from the Latin Vulgate. This is a most unfortunate reading. It mars the literary "full-circle," that is, God's program from the banishment of man from the tree of life in Genesis 3 to its restoration to His saints at the end of the very last chapter in the Bible.
